TWO WEDDINGS AT GREENSBURG Special to the Indianapolis Journal

GREENSBURG, Ind., Nov. 14.—There were two weddings of well-known young people here today, James H. Randall and Miss Ella H. Me Laughlin being one of the couples. The groom is the son of Coroner-elect George Randall.

The other marriage was that of George H. Dunn, jr., and Miss Mary Warthin. The groom is the son of ex-Postmaster Dunn, and was long his deputy, and more recently has been manager of the Grand Opera-house. The bride is the only daughter of Mr. E. Warthin, a prominent merchant, and is quite an accomplished young lady. BARDIE-CULLOM.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Nov. 14 .- The social event of the season in this city was the marriage, tonight, of Miss Carrie Cullom, daughter of United States Senator Cullom, and Robert G. Hardie, of New York. The bride was attended by a little niece, the groom by James S. Morrill, son of Senator Morrill, of Vermont. Congratulations were received from the President-elect and Mrs. Harrison, the Cabinet officials, Senstors and other notable personages, and their wives. Mr. and Mrs. Hardie will live in New York.

THE CHRYSANTHEMUM SHOW.

Yesterday was school children's day at the Chrysanthemum show, and crowds of them embraced the opportunity to enjoy the beautiful flowers. For a few hours other guests were completely crowded out. The managers desire it said that the crowd was so great and the dan cer to the plants, which were unprotected by even a railing, so imminent, that they were obliged to close the doors, which is the reason that some children who came after 4 o'clock could not gain entrance. The day was marked by the arrival of the famous "Mrs. Alpheus Hardy." The flower is white, and the petals look waxy and are closely curied. The special feature is the peculiar frost-like appearance which it has. It was very

The orchid display is much finer than last year-one especially is a cluster of flowers. It is the only one this year from the plant called the Vanda Sandenana, which belonged to the Morgan collection and sold for $2,000. These orchids are indescribable, and no words could give even a faint idea of their appearance. A new collection of chrysanthemums also came

The first premiums awarded yesterday were: Best ten pink, J. J. Keller; white, Hill & Co. Best five seedlings, William Hack. Spesimen yellow, William Hack. Among the amateurs Earnest Huckride, city, took both premiums for the best ten plants and collection of cut sprays. The special prizes were awarded to A. Wiegand, for best collection of decorative plants; $25, by Siebricht, Wadley & Co., New York, to Wm. Hardesty, Cincinnati, for hat marked P. J. Kelleher; for the best musical emblem, D. W. Cox, Crawfordsville; for standing star, Chas. Rieman, and for cross, Henry Rieman.

Among the visitors to the show yesterday were General Harrison and wife. They spent some time in viewing the beautiful collection. Last evening the local florists, who selected as their manager of the affair Mr. Bertermand. eave to the visiting florists a banquetat the Union Station dining-hall. Three tables were spread with 150 plates, at which sat nearly that number of guests; For decerations, flowers in various designs were generally used, a noticeable feature being a large crown of roses of different colors. Large specimens of chrysanthemums stocd about the tables, while other specimens of the brilliant flower were placed about, the floral display as a whole being one of profusion and beauty. After the rich viands had been eaten the speeches began, there being five regular teasts as follows: "Visiting florists, we welcome you to our city," response by William Langeteff. "Society of Indiana Florists, William its Future;" response by E. G. Hill. "National Society of American Florists; its past and future;" response by M. A. Hunt "The National Flower; what shall it be?" response by J. D. Carmody. "The Florist Business; Its infancy as compared with the present," Re-spone by A. Weigand. In speaking of the national flower Mr. Carmody said it should be pure, noble, noarmed with thistles like that of the Scotch, symmetrical, not like the flor de lis. order that it may typely the noblest most peareful and most prospernations. He preferred the water lily. Mr. Hunter, editor of the National Florist, spoke upon the benefit of organizato florists and exhibitors. In regard to the national flower he said none could be created, no matter how fine the sentiment might aspire to do so. The flower of nations had been adopted from associations with great events, and America can hope for such events to furnish her with a flower. The speeches ran until a late hour, after which the banqueters separated. Vote on Joint Candidates. The sheriffs of Marion, Hancock and Shelbs counties yesterday canvassed the vote on Joint Representative and Senator. The vote was as

An Error in the Vote Corrected. An error in transferring the figures of John R. Wilson's votin Ci inton county gave him a arger number in the table yesterday than he received for Attorney-general. This gave Mr. Michener an apparently reduced majority. The right figures appear in the table this morning. At the Secretary of State's office the footings have not yet been made, but they will be ready for publication in a day or two.

Missionary Work

A convention of the Woman's Home Missionary Society of the district of Indianapolis will be held at the California-street Church this evening. The programme will include an interesting address by Mrs. Dr. J. E. Gilbert. The session will continue through to-morrow.

The "Century's" Editor.

Chicago Tribune's New York Letter. The Gilders bave their summer residence at Marion, Mass., where Mrs Cleveland loves to visit them. For a winter residence, they moved, last spring, to Washington square-to that delightful old aristocratic neighborhood of lower Fifth avenue-where business has never dared intrude, although it is rapidly taking possession of the rest of the famous street. Mr. Gilder's offices, the beautiful editorial rooms of the Century, were burnt out a short time ago, but they are being refitted again, and the disconsolate editor's banishment will soon be over. A London paper recently discussed the appearance of poets, and decided that the majority of modern poets look like ordinary prosaic worldlings. Richard Watson Gilder, on the contrary, if one may judge by a single distant view of him across a crowded hall, looks like the traditional poet upon whom lean and baggard melancholy has preyed remorselessly. And yet, doubtless, one would find him the most cheerful and contented of human beings.

The Pope has appointed Mgr. Persico vicar of the Basilica of St. Peter's in return for his services in Ireland. The appointment will probably lead to high preferment.

MR. BLAINE ON THE VICTORY. Augusta Republicans Tender a Serenade and Listen to a Speech.

Augusta (Me.) Special. Augusta Republicans had a pleasant demonstration this evening in celebration of the National victory. Many visiting organizations oined in the parade. The feature of the evenng was the serenade tendered Mr. Blaine. He had his house and grounds handsomely illuminated, and in response to urgent requests delivered a brief but stirring address relative to the recent election. Said Mr. Blaine.

"I join with you in hearty congratulations and felicitations over the great national achievement of last week. We have elected the Republican candidates to the Presidency and Vice presidency; and never did any party have candidates in whom more implicit faith could be placed-faith in their principles; faith in their ability; faith in their zeal; faith in their honor; faith in them personally; faith in them officially. It adds to the value of our triumph that we have secured in Genera! Harrison a President who comprehends the wants of the whole Nation, and who by temperament and experience embodies all the requirements for an executive position whose duties are perhaps more engrossing and exacting than any similar tion in the world. And yet if the election of Harrison and Morton was not the elevation of two eminent citizens to the highest positions in the republic our rejoicing would not have the deep significance which attends it. The President and Vice-president elect carry with them in their deserved elevation the triumph of the protection policy in the United States, and that is the feature of the victory which stirs the Nation."

Mr. Blaine spoke of the sturdy and constant Republicanism of Kennebec county and then continued: "Many persons from the inattention to course of events, and some from mere cynicism, regard a presidential election as only a struggle for the spoils of office. Perhaps a close examination of the 'spoils' would cause them to modify this opinion. We are now 65,000,000 people, and we speak of the danger of having 100,000 office-holders under the national government. Quite true, we have 100,000 officeholders, but a vast number are paid under $1,000 each, and more than four-fifths of the whole number under $2,000 each, while the President does not have within his power the appointment of 200 officers with salaries exceeding $5,000 a year. I doubt indeed if he has more than 100. Certainly 'spoils' cannot profoundly affect the interest or call forth the efforts of a great people among whom opportunities for business and for fortune are greater than in any other Nation of the world. It was something far deeper than 'spoils' of office that called the full Republican strength to the pells-and no question but that of protection could have done it. "But, my friends, let us remember that wiss monition of 'the old man eloquent,' to be triamphant moderately. Republicans have always been more quiet in gaining a victory at the polls than in boasting after it has been secured. I is well that it is so, for victory would indeed be barren of good fruit and unworthy of respect if it aid not bring benefit to all the people alike, regardless of geographical lines or party divisions. We have as sharp rivalry as Democrats or Republicane in the earnest struggles of the campaign, but when the election is over we remember that we are all united in the enduring brotherhood of American citizenship-citizen ship of the East and the West, of the North and the South, citizenship of the great undivided, individual Republic."

UNRECONCILED DEMOCRATS.

They Moorn Because New York Will No Longer Rule the Nation. New York Special in Boston Herald. Turn which way you will, there is still a deep feeling of malice among the Democrats over the result. Not only in New York, but among the Democratic strangers who are here, there is a feeling that for many years to come New York city will never again have the power to control a national election. A distinguished Southern Senator, speaking of the result, to-day, said: "This is a serious blow to the Democratic party. It is a serious question with me whether it racovers from it for very many years. Yet, in many respects it will be a blessing, especially to the section of country to which I belong. The South has no business to be solid against her own interests There are several localities in my and yet we find Congressional districts, and even States, sending solid Democratic delegations to Congress because passion, prejudice and tradition have alited them to the Democratic party. This election will break the sould South, and we will start it out upon broader lines. What we will lose in the South we will gain in the West, and the East will give us some com-home rule, and we believe that this is now secure. This belief, together with the election of a Republican President, will do much to divide our party and give us a brighter view of national political life. This would have come in time had the Democartic party remained in power, and it would have been better for us in that event, but it is sure to be hastened by the election of Harrison-that is, unless the animusities of the war are revived by partisan legislation during the next two years. Should there be an effort on the part of the Republican House and Serate to revive the old reconstruction issues in any form, then fear for our home rule will doubtless prevent any change in the attitude of the Southern States toward the party in power. But I have faith that the Republican policy will be broad and liberal toward the South, and, if so, there will to an era of good feeling that will bring about a new policy and very important divisions in the Democratic party. We find that, as our matertal interests develop and our young men come into business relations with the North, there is a strong inclination among them to get away from the prejudices of the past. This sentiment can easily be made available by the Republicans, if they have the inclination to look into the subject and treat it in a broad way. I have, however, some apprehen sion that a different policy may be pursued, al though I hope for the best. There is a great chance, when the new Senate comes in on the 4th of next March, to bring up this whole Southern question. When the credentials of Senator Randell Gibson, of Louisiana, were presented, they were laid over on account of an objection, and are still pending. Senator Chandler, of New Hampshire, introduced a resolution to inquire into the methods by which he was elected. This whole subject is still in committee. If on the 4th of next March, the objection should still continue, Mr. Gibson would be dsprived of his seat, pending an investigation that may be set on foot. There is danger that this will be done, and, if it is, this whole Southern question will, doubtless, be revived, with all the bitterness that characterized reconstruction days. I should deprecate such an issue. So would the entire South, but the temptation to do this will be very great to those Senators who are yet fond of discussing the questions which grew out of the war." This important declaration from a man high in the councils of his party is worthy of deep consideration at this time. For obvious reasons his name cannot be mentioned, but he represents the best element of Southern life, and speaks by the card. The incident about Senator Gibson's credentials has, no doubt, escaped the attention of most of the Herald readers, but it is a point that will be looked upon with apprehension by those who hope that the days of sectional controversy are over forever. The national Republican committee still claim with confidence that the solid South has been broken in West Virginia, and probably in Virginia If this be true, there will be a chance during the next four years to bring Tennessee and North Carolina into the Republican column. This is probably in the mind of the Democratic Senator who has spoken so warmly upon the Southern aspect of the recens election.

WARNER MILLER.

Purpose of His Candidacy for Governor-His Plan for Fighting the Rum Power. New York Special.

The artist in search of a model for the conventional disappointed candidate, would find a most unsatisfactory one in Warner Miller. As a type of this class he is an utter failure. "I don't think I ever felt better," said Mr. Miller at the Fifth-avenue Hotel to-day. "I'm stronger than when I entered the campaign. The work seems to agree with me personally. Yes." he continued, with a smile, "I believe ! could enter another fight like it to-morrow with-ont the slightest difficulty.

This remark naturally suggested the question, would be do so if necessary again, or had be any regrets for the course that he adopted and pursued so vigorously? The inquiry was met by Mr. Miller frankly. "No; I have nothing to regret," he said. "When I accepted the nomination my chances of being elected were exceed ingly slight. I did not expect then that I could win. My wife did not want me to take it. I told her, however, that I believed it was possible to keep down the Probitition vote and thereby save the State for General Harrison. I started in with that object in view. It was accomplished. Last year the Prohibition vote in this State was over 40,000, an increase of over 15,000 above St. John's vote, in 1884. They started in to get a million votes this year, and in all probability would have polled 50, 00 had no temperance issue been made. That, or much less than that, would have given Cleveland the State. But polling, as they did, less than 30,000 votes, gave us the State by such a pronounced majority that the Democratic managers did not dare attempt to steal the State, or make a contest, as they would have done, had the result been closer, say "Then, Mr. Miller, you do not believe the intwo or three thousand plurality." troduction of the high-license issue weakened the general canvass!" "Most certainly not. I believe that had there been three weeks more in which to make the canvass, and present the que-tion fairly to the voters in some of the Western counties and other parts of the State, I should have been elected. My belief in the strength of the moral forces of the community is more firm than ever. We know now the strength of the rum interest. It has reached the climax of audacity in our polittea! life. It must be overthrown. The Republican party must overthrow it. We have nothing to lose, but everything to gain by a steady advance along the path that we have

Before the reporter went away he alluded to the talk about the place in General Harrison's Cabinet that is believed to be reserved for Mr. Miller. The ex-Senator quickly dismissed the topic by saving: "Such matters are entirely in the hands of a gentleman in Indianapolis, and he is perfectly competent to decide them without assistance from anyone."

An Irish View of General Harrison. Rocky Mountain Celt. Benjamin Harrison is the name of the next President of the United States. His very name. coupled with the great State he represents, send the blood coursing through the veins like the war song of a Nation. The high character of the victorious candidate, his personal services section which should not be Democratic if | in the crisis of his country's travail, his record is they have regard for their interests. If any a statesman, his public utterances and his glorisection of this country needs protection we do, ous revolutionary antecedents all forbid President Harrison from being recreant to the platform of his party or false to the interests of his pative native land. The blood-the revolutionary blood-of the patriot and soldier courses through his veins, and is unobstructed either by the intimidation, the cajolment or the dictation of the foiled assassing of their coun-try's liberties. To him treason is edious fort. People not acquainted with our conditions and loyalty a virtue. The Rocky Mountain News, the organ of Colorado Democrate, says: "No fear exists in the minds of conservative and well-informed citizens that General Harrison will not make a good President. He was noted for intelligence and firmness while a member of the S-nate. He is a widely-read lawyer, has had long experience in public affairs, and will bring to the executive chair an intimate knowledge of party advantages, party discipline, and party dangers." BLACKBURN DENIES IT.

He Says the Rucker Interview Is False, and Defends Grover.

Versailles (Ky.) Special. In regard to the interview with Judge A. W. Rucker, of Denver, in which it was charged that the President predicted his defeat in New York before the election, Senator Jo Blackburn, who was present during the interview, to-day said: "I hope Mr. Rucker will disavow the utterance attributed to him for his own sake. If he authorized this publication, or if he assumes the responsibility of the publication, then I have only to say that for two reasons, both conclusive, he has placed himself beyond the recognition of decent men. First, because he professes to publish to the world, without authority, a private conversation in the shape of an interview of his own seeking, and secondly. because there is not an atom of truth in the publication. "The facts are these: I took Mr. Rucker, an ex-Kentuckian, and introduced him to the President dent at his own request. It was not one week, but several weeks, before the election. The interview lasted but a few minutes. The President never mentioned Mr. Hewitt's or Mr. Grant's name, nor did I, nor did anyone else. The President never hinted, however remotely, to any suspicion that he was to be traded off or foully dealt with by anyone, either in New York or anywhere else. Upon the contrary, he spoke hopefully of the outlook, but added substantially that he was prepared to abide by any verdict that the people might see fit to render. He did refer to the political situation in New York, expressing a hope that matters would be harmonized and straightened up to our satisfaction, but, as stated before, no criticisms were indulged in neither by him nor anyone else, whether toward Mr. Hewitt or Mr. Grant, nor was the name of either mentioned.

The Next Administration's Poet. Boston Herald.

It is as good as settled that James Whitcomb Riley will be the poet laureate of the next administration. Perhaps there may be more popular selections made for the places that the President will have to fill, but we doubt it. While the Hoosier poet writes the songs of the country, it won't make so much difference who administers the laws, if there's any wisdom in the old saying.
